OPERATING throughout the history of mankind, there is seen in effect the law of reciprocity, by which a man's deeds whether good or bad are returned upon his own head. And there are many examples of this operation that we have known from childhood. The great Essayist has given many expressions of this law such as "Harm watch, barm catch" and "Curses always return upon the head of him who imprecates them."

JUST A THOUGHT: The easiest way to buy tron ble is to believe that we can ake care of problems and re ponsibilities by merely pre-lending that they do not exist

In the past of our Country, vast flocks of passenger pigeons almost darkened the skies of wood lands where they flourished, and returning at dusk to their accustomed roosts, were slaughtered in such numbers that they became extinct. This saga of winged creatures may illustrate, in a way, the operation of imprecated in dire destruction.

We can easily surmise that curses like fowls fly home to roost because a man who curses others naturally becomes an object of dislike and loathing. But the law of reciprocity has another side by which it returns a man's good deeds upon his head. "Cast thy bread upon the waters; thou shalt find it after many days."

One In Six Locally On Public Payrolls

(Special to the Avalanche)

Thew YORK, July 9—How many Crawford County residents are holding down government jobs? How does the number compare in proportion to population with the total so employed its other areas?

Figures recently released show that relatively more lettal people are in public jobs Federal State and local—than in most parts of the United States.

Out of every 6 employed people locally, one works in some capacity for a branch of government. The occupational data is revealed by the Department of Commerce part-timers, such as volunteer firemen and nominally-paid officials.

On the average, throughout the country, there are 46 Federal, State and local employees for every 1,000 people, with the ratio varying widely from section to section.

In the State of Michigan, it is 40 per 1,000 residents.

As to the earnings of public employees, they are at the rate of $43 billion a year, which is afine percent moje than they totaled, a year ago.
